Credit Distribution

Prerequisite for 300-level writing courses: UNIV 111, UNIV 112, UNIV 200, 200-level literature (or equivalent).

Prerequisite for all 300- and 400-level literature courses: Three credits in a 200-level literature course (or equivalent).

Writing........................................303, 304, 305, 307, 309, 389, 435, 437, 491-001, 491-901

Criticism....................................445

Linguistics...................................390, 450

Literature prior to 1700..........322, 325, 401, 403, 499-011

Literature 1700-1945.............331, 335, 337, 340, 375, 379, 480

Literature of Diversity.........353, 379, 382, 391-904, 499-003

Note: Courses not listed above will count as English elective credit.
HOLIDAY INTERSESSION CLASSES

Holiday Intersession classes begin on December 28, 2015, and end on January 9, 2016. Classes meet MTWRFS from 9 am to 2 pm

ENGL 215-V03  Textual Analysis
An inquiry into literary texts, emphasizing critical thinking and close reading. Students will study selected texts and their times, focusing on a unifying problem/question with an emphasis on developing skills in one or more of the following areas: reading, writing, research and/or oral communication.

Prichard   MTWRFS 9:00am-2:00pm  CRN #: 25103

ENGL/AMST 391-V13
Topics in Literature/American Studies: Hollywood in History, Fiction and Film
California generally has long held a special place in the American imagination—as the last “frontier,” as a new American Eden, and as the place where the future happened. The cultural environment of Southern California more particularly has long fascinated American writers. The word "Hollywood" itself connotes for writers (and for film makers) far more than the popular images of wealth, glamour and film stardom. Indeed, it is one of the most resonant words in the twentieth-century writer's vocabulary, and suggests issues and conflicts of basic importance within American culture as a whole. Nowhere else but in Hollywood were the paradoxes of American cultural values—success and failure, wealth and poverty, art and commerce—so starkly opposed.

We will take a look at a number of novels and films that seek to convey some truth about the American film industry and the culture of Southern California more generally. Several were written in the 1930s, during the so-called “Golden Age” of the American motion picture industry. And we will do so within the context of California history as a whole. We will read some background information about the history and culture of California, read a few novels set in Southern California all or in part (Nathanael West’s Day of the Locust, Budd Schulberg’s What Makes Sammy Run?, Joan Didion’s Play It as It Lays, Michael Tolkin’s The Player and Evelyn Waugh’s The Loved One) and short stories by Raymond Chandler) and view a number of films, some based on these literary works. Assignments will include several reading quizzes, a few response papers, and a final exam. Given the compressed nature of the class during intersession, attendance at all classes is expected.

Fine    MTWRFS 9:00am-2:00pm  CRN #: 22188
ENGL/LING 450-V03  Modern Grammar
Study of modern English grammar and usage with some attention to linguistic theory. Recommended for teachers at all levels. May not be used to satisfy the literature requirement of the College of Humanities and Sciences. For English majors, these courses (limit of six credits) may be counted as part of graduate or undergraduate degree, but not both. Please contact instructor for course details at wgriffin@vcu.edu.

Griffin  MTWRFS 9:00am-2:00pm  CRN #: 12247
Spring 2016 CLASSES

UNIV 111, UNIV 112 or the equivalent is a prerequisite for all 200-level literature courses; a maximum of three credits of 200-level literature may count toward the 36 credits for the major.

ENGL 206-001 American Literature II
This course introduces students to selected works representing major trends in literature of the United States since the Civil War. As a survey, the course covers major works and figures across three broad historical periods: 1865-1914; 1914-1945; and Literature after 1945. Doing so, the survey treats works within their appropriate social, cultural, and historical contexts while charting themes and aesthetic qualities which connect (and distinguish) individual works. In addition to mastery of course content, emphasis is on the development of analytical ability and skills, critical reading and writing.
Hall TR 3:30-4:45pm CRN #: 33641

ENGL 215-003 Textual Analysis: “The Old Brag of My Heart”: Coming of Age in the U.S. in the Latter Half of the Twentieth Century
In this course we will examine what it means to come of age in the United States during the latter half of the twentieth century. We will begin with a discussion the bildungsroman, a sub-genre of the novel that dates back to Germany in the second half of the eighteenth century, and then examine more recent examples (and perhaps non-examples) of this type of narrative in order to understand the form as it appears in a more recent and local context. Our first text will be Jeffrey Eugenides’s The Virgin Suicides (originally published in 1993), from which we will work backward towards William Maxwell’s The Folded Leaf (originally published in 1945). We will end the course with a discussion of Justin Torres’s We the Animals (published in 2012), a short story cycle that shares many of the qualities associated with the novel-of-growth. In the course of our discussion we will examine the similarities and differences in the works with regard to gender, race, ethnicity, class, age, region, sexual orientation and/or an intersection of these social identities.
Comba MWF 2:00-2:50pm CRN #: 22186

ENGL 215-004 Textual Analysis
Monsters and the Monstrous: This ENGL 215 section will explore monsters as cultural symbols. We’ll begin with some medieval texts that question the line between human and monster; next, we’ll read various nineteenth-century monster narratives and examine the cultural anxieties they address; finally, we’ll look at monsters in contemporary novels, film, and TV. The main goals of this course are to examine the various cultural roles that monsters have filled and to exercise and develop your critical faculties in reading and thinking about a variety of different media.

Brinegar
MWF 12:00-12:50pm
CRN #: 23527

ENGL 215-006
Textual Analysis: Shakespearean Problems

By definition (in the VCU Catalog) ENGL 215 is an “inquiry into literary texts, emphasizing critical thinking and close reading.” In our class (section 004) this semester, we will emphasize the advancement of student skills in critical reading, intelligent writing, academic research, and oral communication. We will read and discuss 6 plays whose main characters present unique interpretive problems: The Merchant of Venice (Shylock); 1 Henry IV (Falstaff); The Tragedy of Hamlet (Hamlet); Measure for Measure (Isabella); The Tragedy of Othello (Othello); The Tempest (Caliban). We will also read related critical and literary texts. Assignments will include regular discussion board postings, annotated bibliographies, short analytical essays, and a longer researched paper.

Sharp
MWF 1:00-1:50pm
CRN #: 22156

ENGL 215-007
Textual Analysis

An inquiry into literary texts, emphasizing critical thinking and close reading. Individual sections will focus on a unifying question or problem. Students will study selected texts and their times with an emphasis on developing skills in one or more of the following areas: reading, writing, research and/or oral communication.

TBA
TR 9:30-10:45am
CRN #: 32078

ENGL 215-008
Textual Analysis

An inquiry into literary texts, emphasizing critical thinking and close reading. Individual sections will focus on a unifying question or problem. Students will study selected texts and their times with an emphasis on developing skills in one or more of the following areas: reading, writing, research and/or oral communication.

Harding
MWF 9:00-9:50am
CRN #: 32149

ENGL 215-010
Textual Analysis: Reading the Harlem Renaissance

While the primary focus of textual analysis is critical thinking and close reading, we will structure our work this semester around the theme of “The Harlem Renaissance” or more accurately “The New Negro Movement.” We will question how the “New Negro” is fashioned through literature and other forms of cultural production to get at the question that W.E.B Du Bois posits in 1926 Symposium, “The Negro in Art: How Shall He Be Portrayed?” We will engage the popular debates regarding the role and responsibility of the Negro artist in representing the race. We will examine themes of passing, racial uplift, and respectability, the politics and economics of white patronage, and the black vernacular. Our goals in this class are to read texts closely, develop a critical vocabulary to discuss them, and to learn how to write persuasively and speak articulately about these texts through blogs, papers, and oral presentations. Although we will focus largely on novels, we will also spend some time delving into other genres such as poetry and film. Readings will include works by, among others, Langston Hughes, Nella Larsen, James Weldon Johnson, Alain Locke, and Zora Neale Hurston.

ENGL 215-011 Textual Analysis
An inquiry into literary texts, emphasizing critical thinking and close reading. Individual sections will focus on a unifying question or problem. Students will study selected texts and their times with an emphasis on developing skills in one or more of the following areas: reading, writing, research and/or oral communication.

ENGL 215-013 Textual Analysis
Upon his request, John Keats’s tombstone bears the inscription, “Here lies One / Whose Name was writ in Water.” Keats’s request to not be identified as a poet or an author is striking. The figure of the author for many cultures is seen as valuable and prominent. Many aspire, but only a few achieve the role of the author. But why does the author fascinate us? What is it about this figure that has enthralled people for many years? How does a person become the author? Is the author a true genius and transcendent figure? Should the author be removed from the text? How does celebrity affect the author? In this section of ENGL 215: Textual Analysis, we will direct our attention to the author, attempting to make sense of the how the author functions within texts and culture. Readings will include novels, autobiographies, short stories, poetry, essays, and theoretical texts.

ENGL 215-014 Textual Analysis
Individual sections will focus on a unifying question or problem. Students will study selected texts and their times with an emphasis on developing skills in one or more of the following areas: reading, writing, research and/or oral communication.

Corner          MW 4:00-5:15pm       CRN #: 33673

ENGL 215-016    Textual Analysis: Shakespearean Problems
By definition (in the VCU Catalog) ENGL 215 is an “inquiry into literary texts, emphasizing critical thinking and close reading.” In our class (section 004) this semester, we will emphasize the advancement of student skills in critical reading, intelligent writing, academic research, and oral communication. We will read and discuss 6 plays whose main characters present unique interpretive problems: The Merchant of Venice (Shylock); 1 Henry IV (Falstaff); The Tragedy of Hamlet (Hamlet); Measure for Measure (Isabella); The Tragedy of Othello (Othello); The Tempest (Caliban). We will also read related critical and literary texts. Assignments will include regular discussion board postings, annotated bibliographies, short analytical essays, and a longer researched paper.

Sharp          MWF 12:00-12:50pm    CRN #: 33931

ENGL 215-905    Textual Analysis
Escapism: Author Michael Chabon stated “Forget about what you are escaping from. Reserve your anxiety for what you are escaping to.” There’s escapism from war, from conformity, from individualism, from failure, from success. In this course we will scrutinize the role escapist literature has in contemporary fiction by applying critical thinking and close readings of selected novels such as Alice in Wonderland, poetry by T.S. Eliot, dramatic works such as No Exit, and films like Memento that involve the theme of escapism. Selected works for the course will center upon characters that either invent or are thrown into altered forms of reality as a way of breaking from their true identity. We will begin our discussion by addressing the significance of escapist literature, then move into specific narratives where twisted or created identities overtake one’s original being. Ultimately, we will explore the question of whether escapism is indeed an art form, and the importance of invented realities in literature.

Designed to introduce you to a spectrum of critical reading methodologies and theoretical perspectives, English 215 will open up new territory in your understanding of literature, culture, and the act of reading itself. You’ll also practice ways to "use" theory in your own writing about literature through informal and formal assignments--and maybe even "use" theory in your everyday life. Our approach to learning critical theory and its application to the humanities will be layered. Written in a witty, colloquial style, our course readings will offer a useful overview of the broad topics, questions, and themes in critical theory today. We will then probe deeper by presenting specific theorists and theoretical texts to our classmates, reading literary texts, discussing issues and ideas on the Blackboard forum, sharing drafts of our work with classmates, and examining examples of writing that "use" critical theory, as it were.
By the end of the course, you should be reasonably familiar with a number of critical methodologies and perspectives (such as reader-response criticism, Marxist criticism, feminist criticism, "queer" theory, postcolonial criticism, and theories of post-modernity, just to name a few) and will have practiced deploying these approaches in your own thinking, reading, and writing about literature. To put it in different terms, you should be able to sprinkle a conversation with references to lofty French theorists and sound like you know what you're talking about!

Hollowell    TR 5:30-6:45pm  CRN #: 32148

ENGL 291-001  Topics in Literature: Gender, Race, & Comics
In this course, students will examine the intersection of gender and race in both independent and mainstream comics. We will explore how the formal qualities of comics are exploited in order to tell compelling memoirs as well as fictional narratives. Particular emphasis will be given to graphic narratives created by women of color. Some questions that we will consider throughout this course:
What is the relationship between image and text in comics? Why are comics particularly suited to articulating issues of race and racism? How are comics gendered?
This course will also make extensive use of VCU’s Comic Arts Collection.
Assignments will include a series of short response papers, a comic analysis paper, and a longer final research paper or creative project.

Lyn     MWF 1:00-1:50pm  CRN #: 33868

ENGL 295-701  Reading & Writing of Fiction & Poetry
Semester course; 3 lecture hours. 3 credits. An introduction to the basic elements of writing poetry and fiction, using published examples of contemporary fiction
and verse as guides in the study of literary form and the production of original creative writing. Students will be offered a practitioner's perspective on genre conventions and the process of revision.

Zipse     TR 12:30-1:45pm  CRN #: 23650

ENGL 295-702  Reading & Writing of Fiction & Poetry
Semester course; 3 lecture hours. 3 credits. An introduction to the basic elements
of writing poetry and fiction, using published examples of contemporary fiction
and verse as guides in the study of literary form and the production of original creative writing. Students will be offered a practitioner's perspective on genre conventions and the process of revision.

Cricchio

ENGL 295-703
Reading & Writing of Fiction & Poetry
Semester course; 3 lecture hours. 3 credits. An introduction to the basic elements of writing poetry and fiction, using published examples of contemporary fiction and verse as guides in the study of literary form and the production of original creative writing. Students will be offered a practitioner's perspective on genre conventions and the process of revision.

Cartwright

ENGL 295-704
Reading & Writing of Fiction & Poetry
Semester course; 3 lecture hours. 3 credits. An introduction to the basic elements of writing poetry and fiction, using published examples of contemporary fiction and verse as guides in the study of literary form and the production of original creative writing. Students will be offered a practitioner's perspective on genre conventions and the process of revision.

Curry

ENGL 295-705
Reading & Writing of Fiction & Poetry
Semester course; 3 lecture hours. 3 credits. An introduction to the basic elements of writing poetry and fiction, using published examples of contemporary fiction and verse as guides in the study of literary form and the production of original creative writing. Students will be offered a practitioner's perspective on genre conventions and the process of revision.

Maurer

ENGL 301-001
Introduction to the English Major
This course will introduce you to the work of an English major: reading (literature, carefully and critically) and writing (literary argument, coherently and persuasively). To help you develop these skills, we’ll read many poems, long and short, old and new; short stories and one novel; and one play to end the course. The main goals of this course are to develop skills in close reading of literature, to develop skills in composing literary arguments, to become familiar with a variety of approaches to literary interpretation, and to better understand what you have undertaken by majoring in English.

Brinegar

ENGL 301-003
Introduction to the English Major
The primary goal of English 301 is to teach incoming English majors to be active and insightful readers and interpreters of a variety of literary texts. In this course we will study the conventions and contours of literary studies as a discursive field. Through the practice of careful and attentive reading, we will learn how to enter into a conversation with the texts we consider. Through the act of writing about the texts we have read, and through a mastery of the conventions which govern literary studies, we will learn how to enter into the ongoing conversations that constitute English as a formal academic discipline.

Harrison
TR 12:30-1:45pm
CRN #: 30777

ENGL 301-004
Introduction to the English Major
Everything we read in this class is engaged with self-consciously exploring the relationship between authors and readers. As a way of learning to form arguments about texts, we will examine how authors represent their relationships to the texts they write and the readers they anticipate, and how they use language to explore the possibilities and limitations of language. In the process of reading metafictions, or fictions that call attention to their own fictionality, you will be enabled to make better-informed decisions about shaping your own writing for a reader’s eye. This course requires you to read slowly, carefully, and closely, to articulate arguments about literature both verbally and in writing and to approach formal writing in a “scaffolded” process from inception, to development, to revision. This course emphasizes the skills and the work habits that are necessary for success in the major. I place a high premium on “being there” (literally and figuratively) and on “participation”; in addition to the formal writing, you will be required to do a lot of speaking in this class and a lot of writing outside of it each week (via Blackboard). And, for your own good (no, really), there will be quizzes and a final exam. We will read poetry (formal verse and free verse), plays, and novels. Authors will include Lynn Emmanuel, Yousef Komunyakaa, William Shakespeare, Elizabeth Bishop, Tom Stoppard, John Donne, and more.

Swenson
TR 12:30-1:45pm
CRN #: 20834

ENGL 301-905
Introduction to the English Major
This course will introduce you to the work of an English major: reading (literature, carefully and critically) and writing (literary argument, coherently and persuasively). To help you develop these skills, we’ll read many poems, long and short, old and new; short stories; and one play to end the course. The main goals of this course are to develop skills in close reading of literature, to develop skills in composing literary arguments, to become familiar with a variety of approaches to literary interpretation, and to better understand what you have undertaken by majoring in English.

Brinegar        MW 4:00-5:15pm       CRN #: 33409

ENGL 303-902    Writing for Stage &/or Screen
Workshop class focused on the writing of a feature-length screenplay-- from pitch, to outline, to treatment, to script.

McCown         T 4:00-6:40pm       CRN #: 33850

ENGL 304-001    Advanced Writing
An advanced study of informative and persuasive prose techniques, with attention to the relationships among content, form and style. May not be used to satisfy the literature requirement of the College of Humanities and Sciences. Contact instructor for further course details.

Spencer        MWF 11:00-11:50am  CRN #: 31830

ENGL 304-004    Advanced Writing (WI)
An advanced study of informative and persuasive prose techniques, with attention to the relationships among content, form and style. May not be used to satisfy the literature requirement of the College of Humanities and Sciences. Contact instructor for course details.

Griffin         MWF 2:00-2:50pm    CRN #: 25299

ENGL 305-001    Writing Poetry
Prerequisites: ENGL 101, ENGL 200, and three credits in a 200-level literature course (or equivalent). Talent is fine, but I'm much more interested in your demonstrated willingness to revise. Each member of our group will be evaluated individually. I have no absolute standards for everyone. How much each of you grows within the course of the semester determines how well you do. In addition to your demonstrated willingness to revise, I'll be looking for your responses to assignments, your self-initiated poems, and the contributions you make to class discussion.

From The Religion Of Revision (which will be at the core of our course): Take any first draft, or poem that’s stalled out, gone as far as you can take it, and revise it. Try out as many strategies as you know. DON'T simply polish, or pick at it. But PLAY with your growing poem more than you did previously, changing tense, changing point of view, line-structure, economizing and expanding where it makes sense to do so. Simply yield to the proposition that when you CAN REVISE ‘TIL YOUR DRAFTS ARE PROGRESSIVELY FRESHER
THAN YOUR FIRST INSPIRATION, THEN YOU’RE A WRITER. And equally yield to the notion that all MOMENTS ARE SPACIOUS AND NEW. Now welcome the fact that, within the moment, even after hours of gaping at the wrong word, one knows the constant opportunity to make fresh moves. Nobody’s there making them for you. Each fresh move is for free and only yours to make. Walk away from your poem when it gets picky on you. Keep sneaking up on it to see what it’s up to while you sleep, meditate, go for a run, a walk, read somebody else, look out the window, or over a cliff, or simply go on growing for a few more years or days. Then be glad you’re silently-becoming poem is now ready for your most recent visit. And that your poem is no more up to anything than your readiness for it.

Sange  TR 11:00-12:15pm  CRN #: 33991

ENGL 305-902  Writing Poetry
An introduction to the craft of writing poetry. Students will explore the elements of poetic technique and produce a volume of quality work.

Marshall  MW 5:30-6:45pm  CRN #: 32077

ENGL 305-904  Writing Poetry
This class is designed to introduce students to the craft, habits, and discipline of writing poems. In addition to drafting and revising their own poems and participating in workshops, students will read and discuss the creative and critical work of established poets. Final grades are based on the quality of a final portfolio of revised poems and an accompanying essay, as well as workshop contributions and other brief writing assignments.

MacDonald  T 7:00-9:40pm  CRN #: 22184

ENGL 307-001  Writing Fiction
Eudora Welty writes how “If you haven’t surprised yourself, you haven’t written,” while Cecil Day Lewis declares that “I do not sit down at my desk to put into verse something that is already clear in my mind. If it were clear in my mind, I should have no incentive or need to think about it….We do not write in order to be understood; we write in order to understand.” Echoing Welty’s and Day Lewis’s insights, this course is rooted in the idea that the story chooses the writer, and that stories develop through the manipulation of narrative elements. In order to “surprise” ourselves and, hence, write a story, we will examine the fundamental elements of narrative fiction as well as the process-oriented techniques that will allow us to develop our own work.

Comba  TR 12:30-1:45pm  CRN #: 30547
ENGL 307-901  Writing Fiction
A workshop course that emphasizes writing, reading and talking about short fiction. Participants will produce three original stories for workshop and complete a revision of one story for the final portfolio. Participants will also be asked to read and discuss short fiction by classic and contemporary authors.
Blossom  W 7:00-9:40pm  CRN #: 28648

ENGL 307-002  Writing Fiction
A workshop primarily for the student who has not produced a portfolio of finished creative work. The course will introduce students to the elements of fiction from the writer’s perspective and require the student to apply those elements in his or her own work. Attendance is required, as is thoughtful and constructive participation in class discussion. The workshop will be supplemented with reading of work by established writers.
De Haven  TR 3:30-4:45pm  CRN #: 31706

ENGL 307-902  Writing Fiction
This is an introductory fiction writing workshop in which students write and revise short stories. We will explore key aspects of craft through reading and discussing stories, and work to produce polished, complete work.
McCown  R 4:00-6:40pm  CRN #: 33635

ENGL 307-904  Creative Writing: Fiction
In this course, we will explore what a story is, how to discover and develop the stories you want to tell, and the narrative techniques to create and shape them and make them wonderful. You will read and discuss published stories as models, write exercises designed to develop your narrative skills, as well as write original stories. Much of the class will be conducted as a workshop. This means that you provide the audience for each other's work, reading and commenting in class and in written critiques.
Danvers  M 7:00-9:40pm  CRN #: 29298

ENGL 309-001  Writing Creative Nonfiction
In this workshop/lecture class, we'll shape (and complicate) personal experience, memory, commentary, texts from other genres, and when called for, research, into essays that are, in the words of Scott Russell Sanders, "experiments in making sense of things." Students will write drafts--some in response to assignments--and will bring copies for discussion and critique. The class includes a thorough reading component of mostly contemporary essays. The final grade is based on studio work (reading entries, freewrites, drafts and writer's memos, critiques) and a final portfolio of revisions.

Shiel
TR 2:00-3:15pm
CRN #: 32354

ENGL 309-905  Writing Creative Nonfiction
This course will explore the genre of creative nonfiction. Readings will include classic and emerging literary nonfiction, including essays, memoir, and literary journalism. Students will learn how to translate personal experience and research into effective pieces of creative nonfiction as we work to define the term “creative nonfiction” by reading work representing a wide range of content and form. Our goals with readings will be multifold: leaning to read aesthetically in ways which train our abilities to talk about style and rhetoric, learning to read as writers, and learning to read the form critically. We will also delve into the ethical considerations that come into play when writing about lived experience. Here are some key questions that will guide our exploration: What elements are key to the craft of nonfiction writing? What is the ethical landscape nonfiction writers navigate? How do these ethical questions come into play in our own work? How does substantial revision differ from editing? How can we be the best readers of others’ writing?

Fletcher
TR 5:30-6:45pm
CRN #: 33674

ENGL 310-001  Business & Technical Report Writing
Semester course; 3 lecture hours. 3 credits. Prerequisites: UNIV 200 or HONR 200, and ENGL 201, 202,203,204,205,206,211,215,236,291, or 295. Development of critical writing skills used in business, science, technology, and government, including social media/online writing, process explanations, reports, manuals, and proposals. The course will include such topics as communication theory, technical style, netiquette, illustrations, and formats for proposals, reports, and manuals.

Grothues
MWF 10:00-10:50am
CRN #: 34062

ENGL 322-001  Medieval Literature: Old English to Middle English
This course examines Old English epics and alliterative poetry in their cultural, social, and literary contexts, and the rise of Middle English literature following the Norman Conquest and culminating in works of Chaucer, his contemporaries, and perhaps their readers up through the fifteenth century. Students will learn a little bit about reading Old English and Middle English, though many texts will have translations available in modern English. While the course requires no prior background in older literatures, students must arrive with the willingness to work to understand older forms of the English language. We will read various genres including saints’ lives, chivalric romances, debate and dialogue poetry, lyrics, and drama. Required work includes short papers, exams, a translation project, and an in-class presentation.

Shimomura

TR 9:30-10:45am

ENGL 325-001 Early Modern Literature

An introduction to the literature of the 16th and 17th centuries, which may include Sidney, Spenser, Donne, Jonson, Lanyer, Wroth, Phillips, Cavendish, Bradstreet, Hutchinson, Milton and Bunyan. Further course details TBA.

Eckhardt

TR 11:00-12:15pm

ENGL 331-001 Restoration & 18th Century Literature

This period saw the emergence of many things we consider “modern” with the development of literary genres (the essay, the novel, the periodical), economic practices (the stock market, consumer culture), and social behavior and preoccupations (fashion, celebrity culture, media) that we would recognize in some form today. This course will be an introduction to this period and explore a variety of verbal and visual texts (drama, poetry, the novel, essays, prints, maps, newspapers) within the context of these specific commercial, social, and economic practices. Authors may include Aphra Behn, Alexander Pope, Eliza Haywood, Jonathan Swift, Richard Steele, Samuel Richardson, Susannah Centlivre, and Laetitia Pilkington. Course requirements will include a few short written assignments, a mid-semester and final exam, and a final paper or project. Students wishing additional details about the class are welcome to contact me by e-mail (cingrass@vcu.edu).

Ingrassia

TR 12:30-1:45pm

ENGL 335-001 British Literature of the Romantic Era

The period in Europe between the Treaty of Paris that ended the American war in 1783 and the passage of the Parliamentary Reform Bill in 1832 witnessed the cataclysms of the French Revolution, the Napoleonic wars, rapid industrialism—and also a remarkable flowering of culture. This course focuses on the poets who make these years the most important for poetry in English since Shakespeare’s day—writers such as Coleridge, Wordsworth, Byron, and Keats. We will also look at the familiar essay (Lamb, Hazlitt), and novels by Austen and Mary Shelley. ENGL335 is a specialized literature class at a university; you should expect to spend at least three hours out of class for each hour in class. This course counts towards the 1700-1945 requirement for the VCU English Major. It may be used for the British Studies Minor. It may not be used for the general education requirements. Grades will be based on attendance, participation, quizzes, interactive media; formal written papers; a midterm and a final examination.
ENGL 337-001 Victorinan Poetry
This course will introduce you to British poetry written during the Victorian period (1837-1901), with particular attention to the time and culture of Victorian Britain. We will read male and female poets in roughly equal proportions, including Alfred Lord Tennyson, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Robert Browning, Christina Rossetti, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and William Morris, as well as some or all of A. C. Swinburne, Augusta Webster, "Michael Field," Alice Meynell, Mary Elizabeth Coleridge, Thomas Hardy, Oscar Wilde, Lionel Johnson, and Ernest Dowson. Class assignments will include two or three essay papers, weekly written responses, and one live oral recitation, from memory, as well as the option to edit and introduce an anthology of poems by a neglected Victorian writer.

ENGL 340-901 British Literature of the Modern Era
In this course we will consider international modernism from a British cultural perspective, as poets and novelists rethought the relationship between the British Isles and the imperial holdings they had come to dominate. While some young artists distinguished themselves from their predecessors with avant-garde style, others promoted continuity with British cultural tradition. In many ways British modernism reimagined England both as an international center of innovation and as the source of a unique cultural identity, even though the tension between these two impulses sometimes drove their literature into difficult and ambiguous terrain. Our course will gauge the relative success of such experiments by Conrad, Yeats, Mansfield, Joyce, Woolf, and Auden, among others.

ENGL 347-001 Contemporary Literature
This course examines contemporary world literature from the last thirty years. Our readings will range across genres and include writers from around the world, mostly in English with a few texts in translation. We will explore innovations in aesthetics as well as historical developments that have influenced recent literary production. In particular, our readings will compel us to investigate how ethnicity, nationalism, religion, gender, and economics have impacted the formation of world literature and its bearings on social justice. Authors may include: DeLillo, Kushner, Coetzee, Danticat, Diaz, Cisneros, Rankine, Morrison, Bolaño, Ngũgĩ, and Roy.
ENGL/WMNS 353-001  Women Writers
In this course we will examine creative work written by U.S. women in the context of Second Wave Feminisms. We will begin with a discussion of the word “Feminism” and its various meanings, and then examine different feminist perspectives as evidenced in short stories and novels written by women in the latter half of the twentieth century. We will consider liberal, radical, Marxist/Socialist, Intersectional, Queer, and Postcolonial feminist perspectives, and culminate our study with an examination of Danzy Senna’s novel Caucasia in relation to how this work may or may not reflect a new, Third Wave feminist ideology.
Comba  MWF 11:00-11:50am  CRN #: 29179

ENGL/RELS 361-001  The Bible as Literature
Literary aspects of the Bible will be considered. Also, attention will be given to the history of the English Bible. Please contact the School of World Studies (827-1111) for course details.
Edwards  MWF 12:00-12:50pm  CRN #: 12229

ENGL 366-001  Writing & Social Change: Prison Writing
This course opens an inquiry into the many reasons people turn to crime and the many challenges they face while incarcerated. Through the study of published prison writers and our own communal writing practice at the Richmond City Jail, we will search for the common ground connecting our diverse experiences—incarcerated or free, black or white, male or female—and together envision a world we can share that has less crime and ideally less jails and prisons. To do this, we will need to wrestle with the paradox at the heart of writing and social change; the burden of becoming a writer—becoming honest, creative and responsible with words and, presumably, the deeds, too—while struggling with the forces in jail and “out there” in society that would subvert change. Because you will be working side by side with the residents of the jail—they will become your classmates—you need to apply to get into this class. If you are accepted, you need to be prepared to go through some orientation from staff at the jail and fill out some paperwork. To apply, please send Professor Coogan a short essay—3 or 4 paragraphs—explaining what you hope to gain from the course and what you feel you can offer, touching on your personal experiences, intellectual experiences and aspirations in college and later in life. This is a unique service learning course and one that also counts for the literature of diversity. It’s also a unique opportunity to make a difference with your writing and your time.
Enrollment is limited to twelve VCU students. Feel free to contact Professor Coogan if you have any questions before applying.

Coogan    TR 1:30-3:00pm    CRN 33406

ENGL 368-001  Nature Writing
Most of our study focuses on contemporary American nature writing. We'll read essays from Orion magazine’s "Coda" column and from The Norton Book of Nature Writing, as well as Terry Tempest Williams's book-length essay Refuge: An Unnatural History of Family and Place. Students will write every day in class, and have drafts critiqued by classmates. The course is rigorous in both its reading and writing requirements.

Shiel    MWF 11:00-11:50am    CRN #: 32484

ENGL 375-001  U.S. Literature after 1945
This course is intended as a survey of American literature from 1945 to the present day. As such we will read and discuss selected works representing significant trends in that since the end of World War II. In particular, we will focus on the relationship between literature and the society in which it was produced and read, between art and life itself. We will pay some attention to the blurring of literary genres in contemporary literature, and on contemporary writers’ emphasis on autobiography and other forms of nonfiction. There is a certain dreariness to the existentialist, post-existentialist and confessional modes of much of this work, so this semester I am determined to try to introduce some of the more interesting comic writing that has been done during this same time. Overall, I hope to help you think, talk, and write more effectively about your reading. Among the authors we are likely to read are Paul Auster, Bharati Mukherjee, Joan Didion, Saul Bellow, Alice Walker, Kurt Vonnegut, Ann Beattie, Jayne Ann Phillips, Tim O’Brien, Anne Sexton, Raymond Carver, Denis Johnson, Randall Jarrell, Allen Ginsberg, and Robert Lowell. You should expect to read one novel, or several short stories or groups of poems, each week. There will likely be a midterm, a 4-5 page paper, a number of reading quizzes, a second paper or series of Blackboard postings (your choice) and a comprehensive final exam that will include a take-home essay portion. Classes will mix informal lecture and discussion with a decided emphasis on the latter.

Fine    MW 5:30-6:45pm    CRN #: 33400

ENGL 379-002  African-American Literature
From the Beginnings through the Harlem Renaissance
This course offers a survey of and introduction to the African American vernacular tradition as well as African American engagement with print culture in the development of African American letters. We engage such key moments and movements as: the Negro Spirituals and work songs, the historic publication of Phillis Wheatley’s Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral (1773), W.E.B Du Bois’s seminal The Souls of Black Folk (1903), and the Harlem Renaissance/New Negro Movement (1919-1937). We will examine themes of literacy, self-writing, protest, and orality. We will question: What is the role of writing in the construction of black identity, freedom, and citizenship? What is the purpose and aesthetics of black art? How do early black writers employ, construct, and revise various literary forms such as the eulogy, the novel, and the autobiography and to what end? How do these writers begin to signify on a developing tradition of African American letters by redeploying tropes such as the talking book?

Jones

TR 12:30-1:45pm

CRN #: 33675

ENGL 382-001 African-American Literature: Realism to the Present

This survey course introduces students to works of African-American literature created between the outset of the Second World War and the present. Historical periods, aesthetic and political movements covered include: Realism/naturalism/modernism; Protest fiction and the Protest Novel; Civil Rights and Black Arts; Literature After 1975. Particularly for literature after 1975, themes explored include gender, sexuality, health and difference especially in relation to works created by authors who conventionally fall outside of the accepted canon of later twentieth century and contemporary African-American literature. Works prior to 1975 come predominately from the Norton Anthology of African American Literature while those after 1975 include works from the anthology as well as outside works by writers such as James Baldwin, Thomas Glave, Audre Lorde, Pearl Cleage, Alice Walker and Toni Morrison. In addition to mastery of course content, emphasis is on the development of analytical ability and skills and searching to find the interconnectedness or threads that can be found in distinct texts.

Hall

TR 5:30-6:45pm

CRN #: 33631

ENGL/TEDU 386 Children’s Literature

Housed in School of Education. Please contact School of Education for course details at 828-1305.

- 001 Cipolletti
  - F 9:30am-12:10pm
  - CRN #: 29107

- 901 Deicas
  - M 7:00-9:40pm
  - CRN #: 29109

ENGL/TEDU 389 Teaching Writing Skills

Housed in School of Education. Please contact School of Education for course details at 828-1305.
ENGL/LING 390-001  Introduction to Linguistics
This course is a general introduction to the field of linguistics, the scientific study of language. It will introduce you to the biological, cognitive and social basis for human language and communication with an emphasis on basic, formal methods of linguistic description. Basic areas covered under formal linguistics includes phonetics (the properties of speech sounds), phonology (the systematic sound patterns of language), morphology (the grammatical structure of words), syntax (the structure of phrases and sentences), and semantics/pragmatics (the meaning and use of words and sentences). This course will also cover areas such as historical linguistics (language change and language relationships), language acquisition (how languages are acquired in children vs. adults) and physiological basis of language (language and the brain). This course is designed to give you a brief but broad overview of the methods used in linguistic description and analysis and to familiarize you with the main areas of inquiry within the field of linguistics.

Griffin  MWF 12:00-12:50pm  CRN #: 30558

ENGL/LING 390-901  Introduction to Linguistics
This course is a general introduction to the field of linguistics, the scientific study of language. It will introduce you to the biological, cognitive and social basis for human language and communication with an emphasis on basic, formal methods of linguistic description. Basic areas covered under formal linguistics includes phonetics (the properties of speech sounds), phonology (the systematic sound patterns of language), morphology (the grammatical structure of words), syntax (the structure of phrases and sentences), and semantics/pragmatics (the meaning and use of words and sentences). This course will also cover areas such as historical linguistics (language change and language relationships), language acquisition (how languages are acquired in children vs. adults) and physiological basis of language (language and the brain). This course is designed to give you a brief but broad overview of the methods used in linguistic description and analysis and to familiarize you with the main areas of inquiry within the field of linguistics.

Griffin  MW 5:30-6:45pm  CRN #: 28654

ENGL 391-010  Topics: Victorian Women Poets
This class will survey poetry by a dozen or more British women poets of the Victorian Era, including Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Christina Rossetti, Augusta Webster, Mathilde Blind, “Michael Field,” Mary Elizabeth Coleridge, and Amy Levy. We will be reading poems that vary widely in form and subject-matter, including Elizabeth Barrett Browning’s verse-novel Aurora Leigh in its entirety. Assignments will likely include two or three substantial critical papers, shorter biweekly informal written “responses,” and one live oral poetry “recitation” from memory. The class will be predominantly discussion-based, so the expectation is that you’ll come to class prepared to talk and raise questions about the poetry under scrutiny. If you don’t like discussion-based classes, you may wish to consider registering for a different class.

Frankel TR 12:30-1:45pm CRN #: 33399

ENGL/WMNS 391-904 Topics: Queer Cinema

Prerequisite: Three credits in a 200-level literature course (or equivalent).

Society’s dominantly hostile attitudes toward queer sexuality have historically been framed in terms of deviance, pathology, and sickness. In early film, queer people were commonly portrayed as either fearfully sinister villains or objects of ridicule. But attitudes began to change with the advent of queer liberation movements in the 1960’s; with increasing concessions of acceptance, the diminution of stereotyping, and the broadening range of story lines and characterizations suggested that queer people in film could be multidimensional. Bursts of willful resistance to mainstream heterosexist characterizations of queer people have occurred, particularly when queer people take the camera into their own hands.

This course seeks to chart these trends as mirrored in modern pictures from the second decade of the twentieth century to the present time. From an abundance of choices, we have selected vividly telling examples, especially pictures with literary antecedents. These choices are designed to provoke wonder, argument and controversy. Some are windows into forgotten times; some point to a possibility of coming together not yet realized.

We will explore how psychoanalysis, Marxism, sexology, feminism, critical race theory, and post-structuralism influence film representations of queer bodies, sexualities, and subjectivities. We will use reception theory to explore queer interpretations of film. Like other genres of film, queer cinema raises broader questions about filmmaking as an artistic and socially situated phenomenon, as well as about how films are “read.” Some thematic elements include:

• intersections of race, class, and geography, and the impact of these intersections on queer characters in film, and queer film production
• mythos/mythic dimensions of queer narratives
• objectification, fragmentation, and reification of queer bodies
• identity, gender, and sexuality
• permutations of the desiring subject and the desired object; navigating the queer gaze
• queer futurity, the radical imagination, and liberation

Canfield Thursday 7:00-9:40pm CRN #: 26679

ENGL 401-001 Shakespeare
In this course, we will consider the development of Shakespeare’s poetic and dramatic techniques over the course of his 20+ year career in the theater. We will begin by reading two of his most accomplished history plays (Richard II and 1 Henry IV). We will then read four comedies (Midsummer Night’s Dream, The Merchant of Venice, As You Like It and Twelfth Night). We will then read six tragedies (Romeo and Juliet, Julius Caesar, Hamlet, Othello, Macbeth, and Antony and Cleopatra). And we will end the semester with his late romance The Tempest. There will be a midterm and a final exam, plus a short essay and a longer “research” essay.

Sharp Monday Through Wednesday 10:00-10:50am CRN #: 33929

ENGL 403-901 Milton
A study of shorter poems, "A Masque," selected prose, and "Paradise Lost."

Campbell Monday 4:00-6:40pm CRN #: 33963

ENGL 435-901 Advanced Poetry Writing
This course is an advanced poetry workshop. It will begin with some general discussion, readings, and advice on how to generate poems, but will soon focus on a sustained, in-depth examination of the students’ writing in the workshop setting. The influence of other contemporary poets, as well as the usefulness of translation work and wide reading will be emphasized. Individual conferences with the instructor are featured. Many students in this course find it useful in preparing to apply for graduate study in creative writing. In any case, all students are expected to be committed, engaged writers, which will help ensure an enjoyable and productive experience for us all.

For those who wish to offer another writing course or previous writing experience as an equivalent to having taken the prerequisite English 305, the submission of a poetry sample is required for enrollment. Prior to the semester, the sample should be submitted to Dr. Donovan's departmental mailbox, including a cover letter with the student's name, phone number, and address, and an explanation of previous writing experience; that writing sample and letter will provide the basis for determining eligibility to enroll.
ENGL 437-002  Advanced Fiction Writing
Prerequisite: 305 Fiction or permission of instructor. Study of the craft of fiction writing, with instruction and guidance toward constructive self-criticism. Workshop members will be expected to produce and revise short fiction and to become proficient in the critical analysis of fiction in order to evaluate and articulate the strength of their own, and others’, work. In addition, each week workshop members will read the current short story published in The New Yorker magazine for classroom critique.

ENGL 439-901  Advanced Creative Nonfiction Writing
We will be exploring creative or literary nonfiction (presentational literature, the literature of fact, the fourth genre, faction). This exploration will involve us in considerations of what "nonfiction" means, of what “literary” or “creative” means, of how broad a line there is between nonfiction and fiction, of whether dialogue and other presentational techniques and devices legitimately belong to the realm of fiction and whether their use by creative nonfiction writers compromises the very notion of nonfiction. Chris Anderson (1989) points out that the term "literary [creative] nonfiction' is problematic:

The word “literary” masks all kinds of ideological concerns, all kinds of values, and is finally more a way of looking at a text, a way of reading than an inherent property of a text. The problem with "nonfiction" is that it’s a negative term for something that is positive, implying that somehow nonfiction is less than fiction (Literary Nonfiction, ix).

We will also be exploring the essay in its many shapes and purposes. This exploration will involve us in considerations of creative nonfiction sub-genres and considerations of the craft of writing different kinds of expositions and persuasions, personal, formal, personal merging with formal. We will consider how the essays we read and write define what essays can be.

ENGL 445-904  Form & Theory of Poetry
This section of English 445 is intended as a focused study of poetic form, primarily received meters and forms, but also free verse and “open” forms. Students will investigate poetic form through readings in the texts, the course reader, and class discussions, but most importantly through writing original poems--poems in meter, poems in received forms such as sonnets, poems in free verse, and poems in other modes such as prose poems, syllabic poems, and accentual meter. We will devote some special study to the work of three poets who are masters of form, Elizabeth Bishop, Wislawa Symborska, and Robert Lowell. By the conclusion of the class, students should have a good understanding of English language prosody, and a better ability to use that knowledge when writing creative or critical work. In addition to the poems they will be write, students will be asked--during the final weeks of the semester--to give a brief class presentation or short paper on the work of one of the poets on the reading list.

As a good portion of our class time will be devoted to workshop critiques, English 305 is strongly recommended as a prerequisite for this course.

Probable Texts
Elizabeth Bishop, The Complete Poems 1927-1979
Eavan Boland and Strand, The Making of the Poem
Paul Fussell, Poetic Meter and Poetic Form
Robert Lowell, Selected Poems
Robert Pinksy, The Sound of Poetry
Wislawa Symborska, New and Collected Poems

I will also ask you to purchase a course reader that I will make up.

Wojahn
TR 5:30-6:45pm
CRN #: 33642

ENGL/LING 450-001 Modern Grammar
Study of modern English grammar and usage with some attention to linguistic theory. Recommended for teachers at all levels. May not be used to satisfy the literature requirement of the College of Humanities and Sciences. For English majors, these courses (limit of six credits) may be counted as part of graduate or undergraduate degree, but not both. Please contact instructor for course details at wgriffin@vcu.edu.

Griffin
MWF 3:00-3:50pm
CRN #: 27228

ENGL 480-003 Authors: Bulgakov – Biggest Literary Badass of the 20th C.
One of our planet’s greatest authors of the 20th century did not start out being a writer. Mikhail Bulgakov began his adult life as a doctor, but gave up medicine for writing. Because of his gifts at realism, the fantastical, and often absurd humor, Bulgakov’s works enjoyed great popularity, but their scathing criticism of his country’s political principles was increasingly unacceptable to the Soviet authorities. While his initial works dealt with contemporary/historical issues of the times, others focused upon far more absurd settings/situations like a city under attack by giant reptiles, an operation to turn a dog into a super man, or a visit by the devil and his murderous black cat. By 1930 he was, in effect, prohibited from publishing....and as literary historians like to say, he “spent his days writing for the drawer.” His plea for permission to emigrate was rejected by Joseph Stalin – and yet, Stalin liked him enough to keep him alive. During the subsequent period of literary banishment, which continued until his death, Bulgakov created his masterpieces, perhaps the most important of which, The Master & Margarita, only saw the light of day decades after the author’s death. His posthumous rehabilitation began slowly, only to come to full and unfiltered public access during the last years of the Soviet experience. Strangely enough, Bulgakov’s work outlasted the country that prevented its publication. This course will focus on five of his best-known works: A Country Doctor’s Notebook, The White Guard, The Fatal Eggs, Heart of a Dog and The Master and Margarita.

ENGL 480-902  Authors: Nabokov

This course will read some of the greatest hits by international author and phenomenal stylist Vladimir Nabokov, who may have had only words to play with but could be counted on for a fancy prose style (you’ll get those allusions by the end of the semester). On our minds will be Lolita; Pale Fire; Ada, or Ardor; Speak, Memory; and Pnin. We’ll also read some of his earlier works, most likely Mary, The Defense, and Laughter in the Dark, as well as some short stories. The reading will be challenging. The voice will be infectious. Assignments include two short papers and one longer one, a presentation to the group on a work of scholarship (article or portion of a book) from a recommended list, and midterm and final exams.

ENGL 481-901  Genres: Tragedy

The term “tragedy” suffers from the abuse of overuse. As a result, its core concept is misunderstood completely and its descriptive, defining power is greatly diminished. We will examine eleven great tragedies in written form to examine their true focus and import: Oedipus Rex (the granddaddy of all tragedies); Antigone; John Milton’s Samson Agonistes; Marlowe’s Doctor Faustus; William Shakespeare’s Titus Andronicus, Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, King Lear, Macbeth, and Othello. And end with Arthur Miller’s Death of a Salesman. We will then examine comparative scenes from available versions (TV, film, recorded stage productions) to understand how this form is conveyed in other media, and from which we may gain some of our (misguided) interpretations. The end result will be a new understanding of why this term should not be bandied about so loosely. There will be two tests and a final exam; three short response papers; possible – only possible – reading quizzes.

Kustesky
MW 5:30-6:45pm
CRN #: 33677

ENGL 484-001
Literary Movements: Comic Surrealism

So Surrealism means Beyond Realism. So what’s that? So what’s comic that isn’t absurd, isn’t satirical, isn’t amusement—isn’t even funny? (Why do I hate jokes and love to be amused? What makes wit wit?)

Surreal, dude! the kid exclaims while welcoming his buddy’s green hair. Is Surreal merely synonymous with weird? In an age of Cryonics—not too live bodies, in our own time, installed in ice for the better centuries up ahead, impression of Jane Mansfield’s breasts immortalized in cement, no sign of body parts anywhere on the screen, within the green, Nintendo Baghdad night—far out & impacting as the brain-invented bombs some of us call Smart—could the Real already have been replaced by the Surreal? If so, what do we do to lighten up? In such a world, how do we know where we are, and how do we laugh?

How does the Macabre transport us and where does it leave us? Does it increase our wherewithal to survive, even enjoy our crazy world? What happens when we want our humor to be as crazy as our world? Relish it that way? Is this a proportionate yen? A “sane” yen? How is such humor cathartic? Can the Macabre lead to empathy? Imaginative Compassion? Can the Comic Surreal, even the humorously Grotesque, stir us to tenderness? Seriously & funnily, I mean to lead us on guided imagery trips, to not require “Automatic Writing” from each of you, but put up a Blackboard Forum for sneaky exhibitionists, to allow for “happenings” both in front of our faces & behind our backs, inspire researchings into Apollinaire, Breton, Reverdy, Duchamp, Prevert, Magritte, Dali, Paul Simon, the Beatles, Bob Dylan, Kenneth Patchen, Frieda Kallo, Wallace Stevens, big ee, Hart Crane, Gerty Stein, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, imperatively, Frank O’Hara, John Ashberrry, Charlie Simic, James Tate, & Mary Ruefle—how ‘bout some Pablo Neruda?...bit of Shinkichi Takahasi?--& gobs of gorgeous others.

Of course this course has got to begin with showings of HAROLD & MAUD & DOCTOR STRANGELOVE!

Sange
TR 9:30-10:45am
CRN #: 30083

ENGL 491-001
Writing Process and Practice
Writing Process and Practice joins writing theory to writing practice. Students will explore their own writing practice and expand their knowledge of rhetorical processes and the teaching/learning of writing. The course has both a classroom and a practical component. The latter part of the semester, students will devote two hours per week to peer consulting in the Writing Center. Coursework will cover readings and investigations into theories about writing and the writing process, as well as the principles of working one-on-one with student writers. The course will require collaborative work, weekly journaling, two short papers, a mid-semester paper, and a final paper and presentation.

McTague
TR 12:30-1:45pm  CRN #: 21054

ENGL 491-003  Topics: Rhetoric & Public Life
This course teaches you how to use rhetoric—the art of discovering the available means of persuasion—to write about social issues affecting the common good and engage readers stylistically with the right use of tropes, schemes, and figures of thought.

Coogan
TR 4:00-5:15pm  CRN #: ?????

ENGL 491-901  Topics: Fashion Writing
This writing-intensive course targets the Fashion industry and consumers. Students will receive specific instruction for highly descriptive writing about visual design where textile, garment construction, color composition, collective aesthetic, process, and design trends are concerned. Strong emphasis on the development of tone, style, expressive syntax and vocabulary, and solid composition. Students will consider and write about individual design elements, ensemble, and aesthetic features, as well as other visually provocative objects or ideas presented by the instructor. Where applicable, students will also write about their own design processes and style, to include what artistic trends, movements and specific designers influence their work. The course is structured as a workshop, meaning students will receive feedback on their writing from the instructor and classmates in a group/workshop setting, thus secondary emphasis will focus on clear communication, peer critique and oral/written feedback. Additional emphasis on industry terminology, writings by current and leading experts in the field, and descriptive analysis of various print articles and visual marketing strategies. The goal of the course is to equip students with effective writing strategies and writing proficiency specific to the industry, and thus, provide them with useful, real-world skills.
Requirements:
All readings for the course will be provided via Blackboard as pdf files of articles or links to content.
Students must have or establish a blog for use in considering course subject matter. Many course submissions will be posted as blog content, further making the understanding and manipulation of multimedia a relevant aspect of course study. All other completed assignments will be submitted to Blackboard discussion boards.
Multiple in-class writing assignments require either a laptop or notebook, which students must ALWAYS bring to class. No late work is accepted.

Ashworth
T 4:00-6:40pm
CRN #: 32151

ENGL 491-902
Topics in Writing: Multimodal Writing
Multimodal texts are works that use more than just words to communicate ideas. Rather, these multimedia projects allow us to explore our ideas in ways that words cannot always fulfill. In this course, we will use new modes of digital communication to articulate our ideas through audio tracks, videos, images, photographs, or even drawings--to name but a few. We will consider how images are a powerful form of evidence and in what ways we continue to rely on alphabetic text even when our final products exist as multimedia.

Gordon
TR 5:30-6:45pm
CRN #: 33678

ENGL 499-001
Senior Seminar: The Gothic
This seminar for senior English majors begins with the genesis of the Gothic genre in the latter half of the eighteenth century, following some of its permutations through the nineteenth and twentieth centuries up to the present day. While the political and social anxieties that inform the Gothic may shift to varying degrees over time, Gothic literature’s hallmarks (which are also the hallmarks of the cinematic Gothic, AKA the “scary movie”) are its memorable tyrants, victims, and oppressive environments of all kinds. Early Gothic literature is an aesthetic index to the social and political contexts of the time period as well as the beginnings of modern psychology; late 18th-century aesthetic theorists such as Edmund Burke focused on the effects on characters (and readers) of certain environmental qualities (deprivation, vacuity, darkness, solitude, silence, infinity) that manifest in modern examples, too. In this seminar, we will: consider what kinds of anxieties the literature reveals about gender, race, nationality, sexuality, religion, ethnicity, class, and technology; interact with a large gallery of images (using Blackboard) in order to consider the visual analogue; and proceed chronologically through the centuries toward the modern horrific genre. Each seminar project will trace the development of the original/Burkean element(s) and theme(s) up through a modern cinematic heir (a film or films) of each seminarian’s choosing.

Requirements of the seminar will include: a surfeit of verbal participation, a surfeit of written participation (via Blackboard), 2 presentations (one on a film, one on secondary/critical materials), and of course a seminar paper (linked to a written prospectus, a several writing workshops during the drafting process). N.B.: this shall be a true seminar, not a lecture class, and regular attendance is crucial. (If you do not like to "participate," or if you know you will need to miss more than a single class, you will want to consider signing up for a different course.)

Swenson TR 9:30-10:45am CRN #: 33632

ENGL 499-002 Senior Seminar: Mark Twain
This seminar will be on Mark Twain’s writings in the light of recent studies of his works, of his writing about himself, and of his literary and public reputation. The course will include several of his novels, including Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, the latter being considered in the light of a "cleaned up" version of it. Collateral works will include the new Autobiography of Mark Twain. Student-led discussions and oral reports will dominate classes; a research paper will examine a topic in depth; tests and/or quizzes will be only as needed. Optional outings featuring pool tables and accessories will be planned for merriment.

Oggel R 4:00-6:40pm CRN #: 33803

ENGL 499-003 Senior Seminar: Afropolitanism
Africa is hot, and not because half the continent lies south of the Equator. Long before Beyoncé sampled Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie’s TED talk, the Nigerian-born novelist was already a sensation famous enough to attract a parody Twitter account. Beginning with Purple Hibiscus (2004), she has been unstoppable: at this very moment, Brad Pitt’s production company is adapting Americanah (2013) to film, with Lupita Nyong’o and David Oyelowo in the leads. Like Adichie, such writers as Teju Cole, NoViolet Bulawayo, and Taiye Selasi belong to a worldly generation of (primarily) novelists credited with rejuvenating not just the African novel, but also the novel in English. In studying these recent novels, we will examine how the Afropolitan fashion has developed from the controversial, though still quite recent, origins and distribution of African writing in English. In representing the experiences of educated, often expatriate elites and gratifying Euro-American tastes while eliding the historical burden of slavery, Afropolitanism arguably essentializes “Africans” while imposing or reinforcing neocolonial ideologies.

ENGL 499-010  Senior Seminar: Modernism & Post-Modernism
The concepts of modernism, avant-garde, and postmodernism have dominated discussions of literature in the twentieth century and are still relevant in the new millennium. While the debate over their usefulness continues, these terms have shaped our understanding of major shifts in twentieth century literary and artistic culture, from more traditional forms of representation to thematic and formal experimentation, and from a self-critical focus on the processes of composition, to an investigation of the relation between truth and fiction, representation and reality, freedom of imagination and historical necessity. This course will be organized around a core of theoretical readings central to the modernist debate and its postmodernist aftermath. Analyses of poems, narratives, plays, and examples of visual art will test these propositions, highlighting the dissimilar ways in which writers and artists like W.B. Yeats, James Joyce, T.S. Eliot, Virginia Woolf, Langston Hughes, William Carlos Williams, Wallace Stevens, Samuel Beckett, Donald Barthelme, Margaret Atwood, Toni Morrison, Alice Walker, or Gabriel García Márquez have responded to the complex problems of modernity. Class presentations, written projects, and online discussions will help us focus on the author-text-reader-culture dynamic, its role in reformulating traditional concepts of literature and art.

REQUIRED TEXTS

ENGL 499-011  Senior Seminar: Early Modern Literature
An introduction to the literature of the 16th and 17th centuries, which may include Sidney, Spenser, Donne, Jonson, Lanyer, Wroth, Phillips, Cavendish, Bradstreet, Hutchinson, Milton and Bunyan. Further course details TBA.

HUMS 250-002  Reading Film
Develops students' visual literacy by exploring and analyzing the various elements of film (cinematography, lighting, editing, art direction, acting and sound, among others). Examples will be drawn from both U.S. and world cinema and from all eras of filmmaking.

Longaker    TR 12:30-1:45pm  CRN #: 33907

HUMS 250-901    Reading Film
This course aims to develop the students' visual literacy by exploring and analyzing the various elements of narrative film (i.e., mise-en-scène, cinematography, and editing). Examples will be drawn from both the U.S. and world cinema and from all eras of filmmaking. By the end of the semester, students will be exposed to the fundamental vocabulary for discussing both the content and formal aspects of the medium.

Mills     T 7:00-9:40pm  CRN #: 28821

HUMS 250-902    Reading Film
The primary aims of this course are to introduce you to various formal elements of film composition, to develop your "visual literacy," and to hone your ability to watch, assess, think and write about film and/or its component features analytically. In short, the course seeks to make you an active, informed, conversant and participatory consumer of film and visual media. We will explore the medium of film as a vehicle for storytelling, and more specifically, we will explore the component elements of this medium to understand how they function to support the broader, thematic goal(s) of the medium. We will screen a number of films, or parts thereof, in our exploration and development of proficiency with technical and analytical vocabulary associated with film.

Ashworth    R 4:00-6:40pm  CRN #: 23528

HUMS 250-903    Reading Film
This course aims to develop the students' visual literacy by exploring and analyzing the various elements of narrative film (i.e., mise-en-scène, cinematography, and editing). Examples will be drawn from both the U.S. and world cinema and from all eras of filmmaking. By the end of the semester, students will be exposed to the fundamental vocabulary for discussing both the content and formal aspects of the medium.

Mills     W 7:00-9:40pm  CRN #: 32353

HUMS 250-905    Reading Film
The primary aims of this course are to introduce you to various formal elements of film composition, to develop your "visual literacy," and to hone your ability to watch, assess, think and write about film and/or its component features analytically. In short, the course seeks to make you an active, informed, conversant and participatory consumer of film and visual media. We will explore the medium of film as a vehicle for storytelling, and more specifically, we will explore the component elements of this medium to understand how they function to support the broader, thematic goal(s) of the medium. We will screen a number of films, or parts thereof, in our exploration and development of proficiency with technical and analytical vocabulary associated with film.

Ashworth    MW 4:00-5:15pm    CRN #: 30478

HUMS 250-906    Reading Film
This course aims to introduce you to some of the formal elements of film—the building blocks of motion pictures—that are necessary to understand for a close or detailed analysis of cinema. They include narrative (story), cinematography and lighting, mis-en-scène (that is composition and design of the frame), editing, acting and sound. As such the course aims to increase your visual literacy. My hope is that you will gain a more well-developed technical and critical vocabulary with which to talk and write about the films and other visual media you watch. You should be able to perceive and understand how all these film elements work separately and together to communicate meaning.

We will examine scenes (and a few full-length films) drawn from both the American and world cinemas. Overall, this course should help you think, talk and write more effectively about your viewing and make you a more knowing and confident consumer of the moving image in all its forms and media. The class itself will present you with a lot of information about these film elements, and then together we will analyze and discuss how they work in specific film clips. Although most of the time we will be analyzing these short clips, we will watch at least three feature-length films, most likely Citizen Kane, The Godfather, and Amélie. There will be two or three tests, a series of Blackboard postings and a final exam that will include a take-home essay.

Fine    MW 4:00-5:15pm    CRN #: 30966